

MOVING SCAMS ARE ON THE RISE

If you hire the wrong moving company, you are at risk of your property being held for ransom, damaged, dumped or stolen.

When looking to hire a mover and you see any of these red flags, you are in a position where you can - and should - bail out.

Quotes that have not been verified using a visual inspection of the goods, either in person or virtually.

2. Confusing words or too many conditions for moving in initial quotes.
3. Street address for the company should be on their website, paperwork and correspondence, and should be an office address.
4. Movers who demand cash or a large deposit before the move.
5. A very large number of 5-star, online, positive reviews, potentially indicating friends and employees have provided the reviews or the review service was purchased.

The best way to avoid moving nightmares is to research your mover before hiring them. Contact the Better Business Bureau and the New Jersey Warehouse & Movers Association (NJWMA) to find out about the mover you want to hire.
